

OCT 13 1955

Aq. 3-1

Sanitized - Approved For Release : CIA-RDP70-00058R000100020063-9
(Tex.) CALLER

Circ.: m. 52,268
S. 67,007

Front	Edit	Other
Page	Page	Page

Date:

CPYRGHT Our Secret Weapon

Allen Dulles, the head of the U. S. Central Intelligence Agency, says he sees no signs that the Russians have reduced their covert or subversive activities as a result of the Geneva conference.

He questioned how effective the Russian intelligence service is, although conceding that they probably have a larger world-wide network than any other intelligence service because they join intelligence with subversive activity.

He said he thought the Russians were good in collecting, but he was not sure that the Russians are good in analyzing. He said he didn't think that the people who analyze the intelligence they get know the other countries well enough.

Maybe the United States secret weapon is the flood of confusing and often conflicting bureaucratic reports that flow from Washington offices by the mail sackful.